“In-Person” Teen Summer Camp

Would you like for your teen to get out into the community, have fun with his peers, and further develop his social skills all at the same time? Wynns Family Psychology is pleased to offer an advanced social skills summer camp for teenagers! This week-long, activity-based camp will provide teens with the opportunity to learn and practice social skills in “real time.” Using a combination of office-based interpersonal group therapy combined with community-based social activities (bowling, lunch out, outdoor activities, etc.), this camp will help your teen improve life skills and build self-esteem!

Topics for this group include:

- Dealing with bullying (both in real life and online)
- How to handle being teased and left out
- Handling rumors and gossip
- Dealing with cliques
- Battling peer pressure and learning how to make the right choices
- Feeling good about yourself and improving your mood
- Overcoming worried thoughts
- Using self-control and anger management
- Problem solving and conflict resolution skills
